

AngularJS $RootElement Example

- AngularJS application module can be defined using ngApp directive.
- The element where the ngApp directive is used is also known as root element. This element can be accessed using $rootElement object provided by AngularJS.
- In this Demo, "We will see an example of using $rootElement to change the background color of the body element".
- Below code shows the use of the $rootElement. We have created a custom directive which has a button to be clicked. The callback function attached to this button is going to access the $rootElement which in this example is the BODY element and change its background color to green.